

Strong Families. Sustainable Societies.

The Institute for Family Studies (IFS) is dedicated to strengthening marriage and family life, and advancing the well-being of children, through research and public education. We examine both national and regional statistics and focus on three main areas of research:

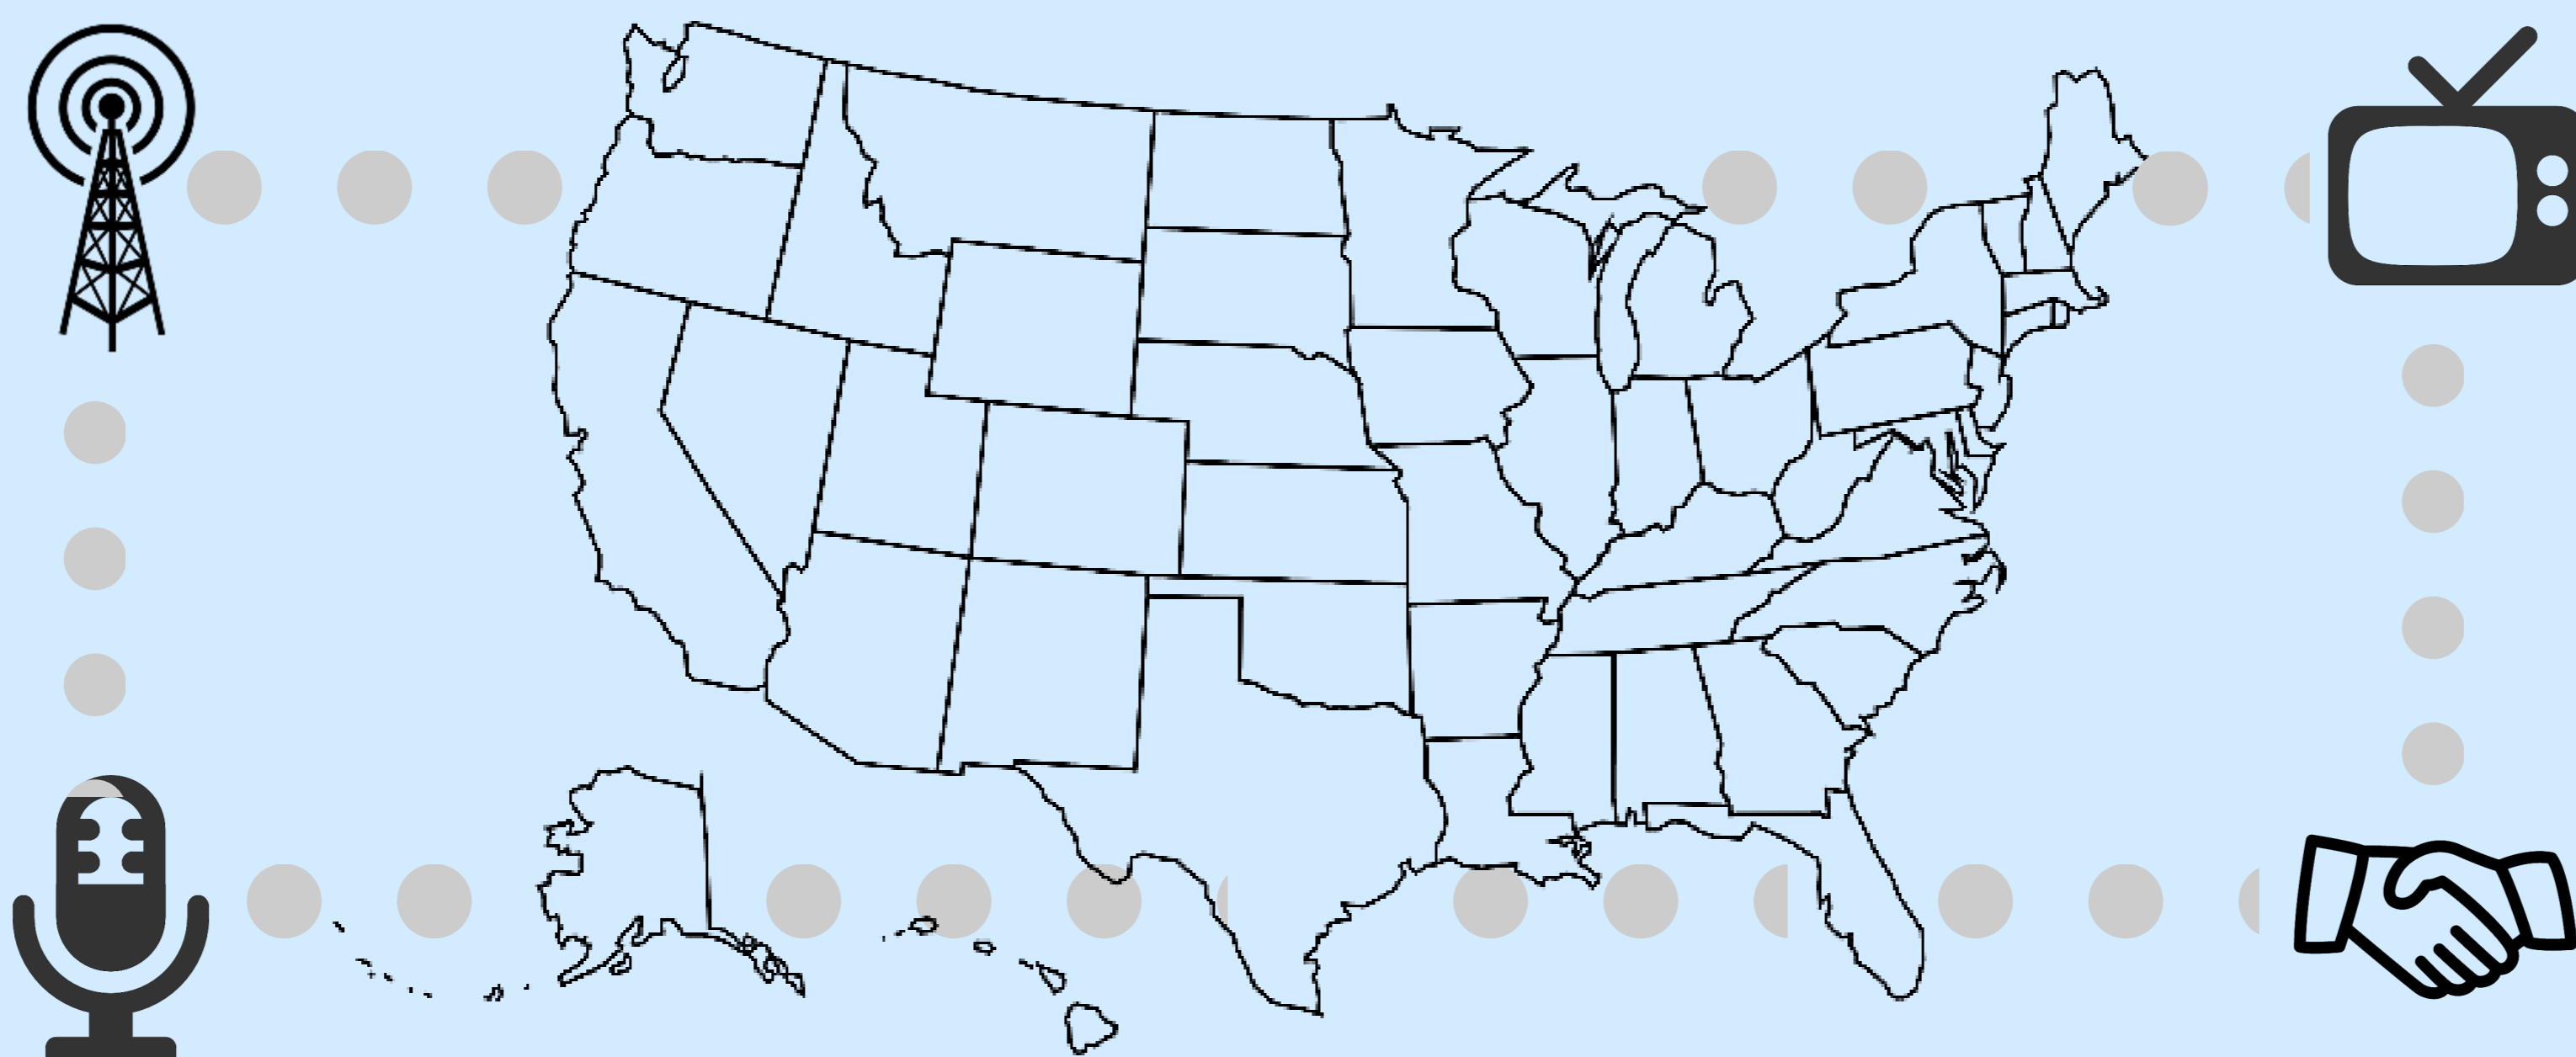

Marriage rates

Divorce rates

Out-of-wedlock birth rates

IFS utilizes a strong network of media outlets, speaking engagements and events and partnerships with like-minded organizations to introduce our research on a local and national scale. You might have seen us on Fox & Friends, read about us in The Washington Post, or sat in on one of our many panels across the country.

Our Senior Fellows are tops in their respective fields and cover a broad range of topics, including:

- Poverty, family, & economics
- Gender & parenthood
- The impact of fatherhood
- How marriage affects graduation & job rates
- Household family structure & macroeconomics
- Minority communities & marriage
